THE EQUINOCTIAL STORM.

Editor of THE TRIBUNE: Sin: Under the above heading in a re-cent issue of the Sunday Free Press, the astronomer of that paper favored the com-munity with the following information: "The equinox is the time when the sun crosses the equator, and when the sun-crosses the equator, and when the days and nights are of equal length. There are two equinoxes in the course of the year, the first occurring when the sun entars the first point of Aries, about March 21, and is called the vernal equinox; the sec-ond occurs when the sun enters the first point of Silva about Sort 22 and is called point of Silva, about Sept. 23, and is called the autumnal equinox. The equality as to the length of days and nights is the same in all parts of the globe."

It is a surprise to me that any one—taking upon himself the responsibility of im-parting astronomical knowledge to the people—should fall into the old rut, and people—should fall into the old rut, and quoting the old stereotyped error, "that day and night are equal in length in all parts of the globe," Nothing could be more further from the truth than the above statement, for there is not a point of latitude on the face of the earth where day and night are actually of equal length. It is true that they are equal on the equator, and when we have said that we have said all there is to be said on the equality of and when we have said that we have said all there is to be said on the equality of day and night. North and south of the equator day and night vary in length. True, the difference is not much for many degrees each side of the equator, but when we reacheither pole we find that the night has entirely vanished and day is twenty-four hours long. Does that seem much like equality in day and night in all pasts. equality in day and night in all parts of the globe? We think not. On the dates mentioned, or the two equinoxes, the sun throws its rays equality on both poles, and from this equality some people have stumbled into the conclusion that day and night are equal the globe over.

night are equal the globe over. on the vernal equinox, 21st of March, the sun is rising for the north pole and is setting for the south pole, and while doing this it is visible to both poles as a flery steed making a complete circle along their respective horizons. On the autumnal equinox the grand spectacle is repeated, with this difference, that the sun is then rising for the south pole and setting for rising for the south pole and setting for the north pole. On both equinoxes several equalities occur that do not at any other time of the year. First, day and night are equal on the equator, and there only. Second, the earth is divided into two equal parts hence the third equality. The sun second, the earth is divided into two equal parts, hence the third equality, the sun throws its rays equally on both poles. Fourth, day and night at any given point north latitude are the same length as at the same point south latitude. For instance, if the day is fifteen hours long and the night nine hours at sevents divided the night nine hours at seventy-five de-grees north latitude, they are respectively the same length at seventy-five degrees

The very fact that is the cause of day parts; 180 degrees of the sun, and 180 degrees of no sun, consequently day and night are equal on the equator; but in the case of either pole this fact gives a very different result. If a man on the squator can see the sun traversing 180 degrees, or half the circle; or, in other words, see the sun ninety degrees away; it is not too much to expect that a man standing on either pole could do the same thing, and in the market at 5 o'clock in the morning is very pleasing, and she pines now for the delights of marketing at this early hour. I think the advantages of a clean, well kept market are so great as compared with the few disadvantages that will follow, that it will soon be a popular and profitable resort for the people of the city."

While from the nature of things day and night are equal on the equator at either pole—and from the very same cause—there could be no greater difference between them; i. e., the night is completely annihilated, and day reigns supreme.

Tribune Feporter's Interesting Interview with John E. Roche.

DISCUSSED SUBJECT FULLY

The Present Huckster System Believed to Be a Menace to Health and Not in Keeping with the Progression of the City-A Modern Market Centrally Located Would Benefit All Classes, Relieve Congested Streets and Possess Many Valuable Features.

In view of the expressed sentiment of citizens generally for a public and modern market in keeping with the growth and progression of the city, a TRIBUNE reporter yesterday sought au interview with John E Roche on the

Mr. Roche is always fully alive to movements that shall redound to the tenefit of the city, and his views are interesting and instructive. He has given the matter research and investigation, is a member of the special market place committee of select council, which will at the proper time precigare sent in council an ordinance circums the matter. When asked to define the present position of the farmer or nuckster, Mr. Roche said: "A study of existing conditions is necessary to an intelligent considera-tion of the question. Today the farmer enters our city with his load of produce and hucksters it from house to house. That portion of the city which they know by experience to be the best for prices and sales is first visited and the result is that here there is a glut, in other parts a famine. I speak more particularly of the articles sold during the summer and generally prepared for dinner, but it is equally true of al-most everything they sell and at all times of the year, In Ostober and November there will be found at points where farmers enter the city men and women seated on the curbstone for hours waiting for a load of cabbage, potatoes, turnips, beef, pork, etc., and this is continued day after day until their wants are supplied."

DANGER OF PRESENT SYSTEM. "Do you believe that goods huckstered in the poorer sections of the city are fresh or inspected?" asked the

'Veal, mutton, beef, pork, poultry and other similar products of the farm are carted about and offered for sale, and it is not known that they are fit the summer season fifty inspectors could not do it. He will tell you that 'bob' yeal, 'bull' beer, undrawn poultry 'fair outside but foul within' and much other unwholesome stuff is offered for sale almost every day. 'Light' weights and 'short' measures are not uncommon. Any retail grocer in the city will tell you that it pays to weigh and measure when buying from farm-

After stating that buyers and sellers would be benefitted by a market, Mr. Roche continued:

"It is scarcely necessary to speak of the congested condition of Lower Lackawanna avenue, or the odorous corner of Luckawanna and Penn, These places speak for themselves. If we have a market place the farmer and the buyer will have a place to meet and any person wanting farm products can find all there is for sale in the city by visiting the market. If any articles not fit for food are brought in the food inspector can ascertain that fact without difficulty and prevent their sale. If weights are light and mensures short the buyer will be protected by the market clerk

"Lower Luckawanna avenus will be greatly relieved, the corner of Luckawanna and Penn avenues and other points will be cleaner, and wholesome food, full weights and measures, cleaner streets, the removal of foul odors, less garbage, improved sanitary conditions, better health, more business, better business, and greater city revenues will follow as a matter of course.

When asked to define the necessary legal steps for securing a market and the status of the matter in select council's special committee, Mr. Roche

"To frame an ordinance to meet our requirements is a very difficult matter. have given the subject much thought, gathered together all the data that I could find, and am not yet satis-fied with my work. I purpose calling a meeting of the committee soon, and will at the same time invite the presence of persons interested for the purpose of getting any ideas they may have to offer. Those it will be well at-tended, and that all who attend will give their views upon the subject. THE MARKET PICTURED.

"The ordinance provides that the place shall be central, equipped with such building, stalls, stands and fixtures as are necessary; that a license fee shall be charged; that stalls, stands been redered and when placed will afford all the needed privacy for local or long distance talking. This public telephone is intended to not only accommodate those who have no telephones, but also to avoid a serious annoyand spaces may be rented by our own citizens as well as farmers; that articles of food shall be inspected before being exposed for sale; that it shall be a people's market until 10 o'clock, from 10 to 12 the merchants may buy, and if anything is left over it may be huck-stered throughout the city. Penalties are imposed for violating its provisions, the office of market clerk is created, his duties defined, salary fixed, dates of settlement with city treasurer for re-

ceipte named, etc.
"I lived at Harrisburg, a market town, in 1883, and know that housekeepers went to market as early as 5 o'clock a m. Merchants at the same time opened their stores and the buy-ing for the day was done at this early and night being equal on the equator, demands that the day should be at each pole twenty-four hours long, and the night nothing. That fact is this; the rays of the sun striking the earth at right angles to its axis, it follows that from any given point on the equator the rising and setting of the sun is just ninety degrees distant. The earth is thus divided into two equal parts; 180 degrees of the sun, and 180 degrees of no sun, consequently day and so great as compared with the few dis-advantages that will follow, that it will soon be a popular and profitable resort for the people of the city."

The market place committee will meet this levening in select coun-cil chambers, and an invitation is ex-tended to all citizens intersected to be tended to all citizens interested to be
